ADVANCES IN NUTRITION FINALIST FOR BEST NEW JOURNAL AWARD

June 26, 2013—The American Society for Nutrition (ASN) is pleased to announce that Advances in Nutrition was named a Best New Journal finalist by the Association of Learned and Professional Society Publishers (ALPSP). ALPSP is the largest association for scholarly and professional publishers in the world. ASN will join other finalists in a showcase session and awards ceremony at the ALPSP International Conference on September 2013.

The judges considered the launch, market research, editorial strategy, marketing, and commercial success of each entry. The competition is open to any peer-reviewed journal launched in the last 1-3 years.

“It is very gratifying that our newest scientific journal has been named as a finalist in such a prestigious international competition,” said Founding Editor Dr. John Suttie. “The innovative content of Advances, its recently announced Impact Factor (3.245) and its online functionality are three reasons we believe the journal has been successful since its inception.”

Chair of the ALPSP judging panel, David Sommer, observed, “The quality and volume of entries this year is high, and while it was difficult to narrow them down, we feel the shortlist represents some of the most exciting projects reflecting the very best of the industry.”

Advances launched in late 2010 in response to the growing demand for a high-profile publication that gathers, synthesizes, and explains the current state of knowledge in all facets of the field of nutrition. ASN congratulates Dr. Suttie as well as the Associate Editors, Editorial Board, and the Society Board of Directors for their support of the journal’s launch.

ASN is the authoritative voice on nutrition and publisher of The American Journal of Clinical Nutrition, The Journal of Nutrition, and Advances in Nutrition. Established in 1928, ASN’s more than 5,000 members in more than 75 countries work in academia, practice, government, and industry. ASN advances excellence in nutrition research and practice through its publications, education, public affairs and membership programs. Visit us at www.nutrition.org.