Message From the President:
Patrick J. Stover, PhD

As ASN President for the next year, I plan to continue advancing the exciting vision and initiatives of ASN's past presidents, and take on five new initiatives: strengthening ASN linkages with academic departments, especially in the areas of undergraduate education; developing global regional graduate student organizations through the GNC to provide a welcoming environment for our international students studying in universities outside their home countries; expanding ASN as a global authority in nutrition with greater visibility and impact by serving as a platform for debate and discussion of the role of science in addressing our most pressing public health challenges; responding to the changing landscape of nutrition research by balancing the ASN portfolio among basic, clinical, public health and global health nutrition; and finally, initiating strategic planning for ASN 2028: 100 Years of ASN- Honoring our Tradition while Furthering our Mission. You can watch a video where I outline these priorities in more detail. I look forward to working with all of our members; please feel free to reach out to me at pjs13@cornell.edu at any time!

OSTP Asks Researchers to Share Stories, Encourage Investment

The White House Office of Science and Technology Policy (OSTP) Associate Director for Science Dr. Jo Handelsman is encouraging researchers to highlight the importance of continued investments in basic research by sharing stories about why basic research is important. To encourage and gain support for budget funding, OSTP has begun a #BasicResearch campaign on Twitter, Facebook, and Instagram.

Foundation for Food and Agriculture Research Names Executive Director

The Foundation for Food and Agriculture Research, a private foundation formed by the 2014 Farm Bill to catalyze innovation in agricultural research, has named its first executive director. Dr. Sally Rockey, the current deputy of extramural research at the National Institutes of Health, will lead the foundation starting in September.

ICHNR Seeks Comment on National Nutrition Research Roadmap

The Interagency Committee on Human Nutrition Research recently launched a DRAFT National Nutrition Research Roadmap 2015-2020: Advancing Nutrition Research to Improve and Sustain Health. The NIH Office of Disease Prevention posted an announcement on the NNRR page and can be found in the Federal Register Notice.

The ICHNR seeks public input regarding the Roadmap's key questions, topics, research gaps and opportunities, and the short- and long-term research and resource initiatives that would address those gaps and opportunities. The roadmap was developed as a written plan to coordinate federal human nutrition research. To ensure consideration, responses must be received by June 25. A final version of the Roadmap is anticipated this fall.

Visit the ASN website to read the entire policy update.

Journal Highlights

Advances in Nutrition

The May/June 2015 issue of Advances in Nutrition, ASN's international review journal, features several new takes on topics in nutrition, including a letter to the editor entitled: "Is dietary sodium policy actually based on science?"

The American Journal of Clinical Nutrition

Read the media alert for summaries and analyses of each study.

- Active video games and energy balance in male adolescents: a randomized crossover trial
- Red meat, dairy, and insulin sensitivity: a randomized crossover intervention study

The Journal of Nutrition

Summaries and analyses are found in the media alert.

- Cranberry juice consumption lowers markers of cardiometabolic risk, including blood pressure and circulating C-reactive protein, triglycerides, and glucose concentrations in adults

- Breastfeeding status at age 3 months is associated with adiposity and cardiometabolic markers at age 4 years in Mexican children

Member Spotlight

- Dr. Michael Grusak, Research Plant Physiologist, USDA-ARS Children's Nutrition Research Center and Professor of Pediatrics, Baylor College of Medicine, spoke at the World Expo in Milan last month. He focused on the importance of crop breeding in improving nutrition in our food supply.
